ABSTRACT

"Bug City" is a video series created to help children learn about insects and other small critters. All aspects of bug life are touched upon including body structure, food, habitat, life cycle, mating habits, camouflage, mutualism (symbiosis), adaptations, social behavior, and more. Each program features dramatic microscopic photography, fun commentary, and bug facts. A teaching guide is also included. The topic of this lesson is beetles and contains information on various unique and interesting species of beetles as well as their characteristics. Instructions for making a beetle habitat by setting up a colony of mealworms are presented. (WRM)
